The Tartan Terrors

For thirty years, The Tartan Terrors have been bringing the spirit, passion, and unmistakable energy of Celtic music to audiences around the world.

Blending the rich traditions of Scotland and Ireland with the driving energy of rock 'n' roll, The Tartan Terrors create a sound and spectacle that is uniquely their own. The unmistakable wail of the bagpipes, soaring fiddles, pounding drums, guitars, and the infectious rhythms of traditional Celtic dance come together in a high-energy musical celebration that gets audiences clapping, singing, laughing, and dancing along. Whether delivering a powerful traditional tune, a foot-stomping Celtic rock number, or an unexpected musical surprise, the Terrors know how to keep an audience on its feet and leave them wanting more.

The Tartan Terrors has built a reputation for delivering an unforgettable live experience that celebrates Celtic heritage while giving it a decidedly modern twist. With 11 albums, numerous DVDs, and thousands of performances behind them, the Terrors have spent three decades proving that Celtic music isn't just something to listen to – it's something to experience.

Over the years, their travels have taken them to some remarkable stages and audiences. From the legendary Iridium on Broadway in New York City to the internationally celebrated Dublin Irish Festival and the beautiful mountain setting of Loon Mountain in New Hampshire, the group has entertained crowds across North America and beyond. Their television appearances include Good Morning America, and their performance history includes the extraordinary honor of performing for Queen Elizabeth II, as well as taking part in the celebrations surrounding President Clinton's inauguration.

The Tartan Terrors have also shared the stage with an impressive collection of Celtic and contemporary musical talent, including renowned fiddler Eileen Ivers, Boston's Celtic punk pioneers Dropkick Murphys, and rising bagpipe sensation Ally the Piper. Their ability to move comfortably between traditional Celtic music, contemporary sounds, and high-energy entertainment has helped them connect with audiences of all ages and musical backgrounds.

But what truly sets The Tartan Terrors apart is their ability to make every performance an event. Their shows are filled with musical surprises, infectious enthusiasm, plenty of Celtic spirit, and the kind of audience interaction that turns a concert into a celebration. They bring together the sounds, stories, traditions, and humor of Celtic culture in a way that is both entertaining and accessible, creating an atmosphere where longtime Celtic music fans and first-time listeners can share in the excitement.

From intimate theaters and performing arts centers to major festivals, outdoor concerts, and special events, The Tartan Terrors have taken their unique brand of Celtic entertainment to more than 48 U.S. states and five countries, sharing their music with millions of fans along the way.

The Tartan Terrors aren't just playing Celtic music – they're bringing the party, the passion, and the power of Celtic rock wherever they go. And after thirty years, they're just getting warmed up!
